SPURR'S VENEERS

NATURAL WOOD BACKED WITH PAPER.

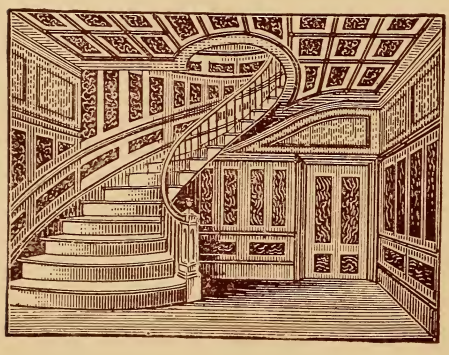

MR. CHAS. W. SPURR:

Dear Sir,— It gives me much pleasure to assure you that your Papered Veneers have proved very satisfactory in my house at Chestnut Hill. They have been in use more than eighteen years, and are now as handsome as they were at first. Yours truly, LEVERETT SALTONSTALL, Boston.

"More durable, cleaner, handsomer, and more wholesome than any other decoration."— FRANCIS L. LEE, 254 Beacon Street.

"After nine years your veneers are as handsome as when applied. Your claims are all proved."— AUGUSTUS PERKINS, 112 Beacon Street.

Spurr's Papered Veneers for Plastered Walls and Ceilings.

Are you building a new home, or remodelling the old one?

Try these PAPERED VENEERS. Until these woods were prepared, only the rich could enjoy the luxury of being surrounded with even the plain-grained hard woods. Now the home can be enriched with the choicest grained wood with small expense, great durability and entire satisfaction.

24 selected and priced samples, with full directions, will be sent on receipt of 12 cents.

HISTORY OF CLASS-DAY AT HARVARD.

CLASS-DAY, though of sufficient antiquity to hold a regular place in the academic calendar, is of more recent development than is generally supposed. Certain forms and customs connected with the day are handed down from one class to another; and the consciousness of performing this year the ceremonies indulged in by the classes of many preceding years, adds greatly to the enjoyment of the occasion. The literary exercises of Class-Day may be traced back to the middle of the last century; but the other features — such as the presence of ladies, extensive spreads, cheering the buildings, etc. — are distinctively modern in spirit and origin. In 1754 the Overseers of the College attempted to improve the elocution of the students by requiring them publicly to recite dialogues which had been translated from Latin into English. This may be called the initiatory step to the gradual introduction of English exercises into the college, and with them the rise of Class-Day observances. There seems to have been no effort on the part of the senior class to organize any thing of the kind for themselves until 1760. The first oration was delivered in Latin in 1776; and this, preceded and followed by a prayer from the President, comprised the exercises until ten years later, when a poem was added, which was delivered in English. The following description of the Class-Day of 1793 is taken from the diary of one of the members of that class: "The order of the day was this: At ten o'clock the class walked in procession to the President's house, and escorted him, the Professors and Tutors, to the chapel, preceded by the band playing solemn music. The President began with a short prayer. He then read a chapter from the Bible. After this he prayed again. Cutler then delivered his poem. Then the singing club accompanied by the band performed William's Friendship. This was succeeded by a valedictory Latin oration by Jackson. We then formed and waited on the Government [meaning the faculty] to the President's house, where we were very respectably treated with wine, etc. We then marched to Jackson's room, where we drank punch. At one we went to Mr. Moor's tavern, and partook of an elegant entertainment which cost 6/8 [$1.06¼] apiece. Marching then to Cutler's room, we shook hands, and parted with expressing the sincerest tokens of friendship."

In 1802, owing to a growing inclination of the students to have the oration in English, the Faculty voted, that "no performance but a valedictory oration in the Latin language, except music adapted to the occasion, be permitted in the chapel on the day when the seniors retire from the society." But a few years later both the poet and orator were allowed to deliver their parts in English. Then, as the day grew in importance, and the exercises became more elaborate, other officers were added to the list. The first added after orator and poet was the odist. In 1829 the first chorister appeared; and a few years later, the hymnist. The large tree, now known as the "Class-Day Tree," was formerly called the "Rebellion Tree," from an episode in college history early in this century. The first class to dance round this tree was Ralph Waldo Emerson's, the class of 1826. In 1834 the custom among the seniors of treating all comers to punch seemed firmly established; but the disorder attendant upon this feature of the day led to an effort at reform in 1838, when ladies were introduced upon the scene. This class, under the influence and guidance of their poet, James Russell Lowell, did much toward introducing the happiest and most interesting features of the modern Class-Day. Punch disappeared entirely in 1852. In 1850 the authorities recognized the claims of the day by placing it on the academic calendar.

The system of entertainment of guests at present is largely that of co-operation. Extensive spreads are given under the auspices of the leading societies, and by this combination of students many features are added to the entertainment which could not be given by students acting as hosts singly. Bands of music, elaborate floral decorations, efficient service, are obtained by co-operation, which would necessarily be omitted in any other system. Still many private spreads, so called, are given by the wealthier students, at which nearly every possible luxury is provided. The general decorations of the yard, the orchestra and band, and certain other expenses, are paid by the class at large.

Dancing, one of the important features of the modern Class-Day, was formerly confined to the "Green," — as the turf in front of Holworthy Hall was called. In 1841 Harvard Hall was altered by the removal of the library, and this was immediately utilized for round dances. As other buildings suitable for this exercise arose, the green was gradually abandoned; and dancing now takes place in Memorial Hall, the Hemenway Gymnasium, Sever Hall, Massachusetts Hall, Holden Chapel, and other college buildings. The origin of cheering the buildings is uncertain, but the custom has probably existed for about forty years. The Class-Days of half a century ago were more public than now, though it is to be doubted whether more people were attracted to the scene. The feeling has been growing stronger every year, that this day is the private property of the senior class; and so the college and nearly all Cambridge regard it.

It Stands at the Head.

ONE touch of the finger should produce any character used by the operator of a writing machine; instruments that fail to accomplish this are deficient and do not fully meet the necessity that brought them forth. These facts are self-evident.

The No. 2 "CALIGRAPH" is the only writing machine that fully economizes time and labor, and economy of time and labor is the best reason we know for soliciting trade. Granting that we are at the front in this, we can show that our late improved machines excel in mechanical merit, durability, and beauty of work.

Over 15,000 "Caligraphs" are in daily use.

We publish 400 letters from prominent men and firms which are convincing.

HARVARD HISTORY TO 1887.

College founded Nov. 7 (Oct. 28, Old Style), 1636, by a vote of the General Court of the Colony of Massachusetts Bay; 1638, the Rev. John Harvard, a graduate of Cambridge, Eng., bequeathed to the College half (about £700) of his estate and the whole of his library; first master of the school, Nathaniel Eaton; first president, Rev. Henry Dunster; first tutor, Henry Flynt, appointed in 1639; first Commencement exercises, 1642, — nine graduates; first charter granted, 1650; first professor, Edward Wigglesworth (theology), 1721; in 1728, Latin ceased to be the spoken language of professors and students; first annual catalogue, 1819; elective system introduced, 1825; two hundredth anniversary celebrated Sept. 17, 1836, address by President Josiah Quincy, presiding officer at the Pavilion banquet Edward Everett, Yard and Halls illuminated; in 1865 all legal connection of Harvard with the State was severed; in the same year was celebrated Commemoration Day, in honor of the soldier-alumni and students killed in the war of 1860–65, collation in Pavilion, Ode by J. R. Lowell; Austin Hall (law), gift of Edwin Austin, finished 1883; John Langdon Sibley, class '25, died Dec. 9, 1885; in 1885 Mr. Henry F. Waters, class '55, discovered in England the true ancestry of John Harvard and the record of his baptism, as follows: "John Harvye s. of Robt. a Butcher." The Medical School founded 1783; Divinity School, 1815; Law School, 1817; Lawrence Scientific School, 1847; Museum of Comparative Zoölogy, 1859. In 1740 there were at Harvard about one hundred students; in 1819 there were 388; in 1887 there are 1,666, with 184 instructors, and 242 courses of study. Nearly 15,000 degrees have been conferred by the University. Recent gifts to the College have been a $100,000 fund from Francis E. Parker, fund by John Eliot Thayer for new Quarterly Journal of Economics, and $115,000 by Thomas Jefferson Coolidge for new Physical Laboratory (finished October, 1884). The new plan of religious instruction embraces voluntary attendance at prayers, and increase of religious services under the new Plummer Professor and five "preachers to the University" appointed for one year. The University occupies about fifty large buildings for research, instruction, and dormitories. The University is unsectarian, and the prevailing tone is that of intellectual freedom united with a wise conservatism in respect to all matters tested by time and custom. It is a private incorporated institution, supported partly by fees of its students, but mainly by gifts of others and the income from its vast endowments.

RULES FOR CLASS-DAY OF 1887.

All seniors and students, as well as all others, are obliged to have tickets to the different exercises, except where students and graduates go by classes.

Seniors are to appear in dress-suits, white cravats, and silk hats, both on Class Day and Commencement Day.

Each ticket for Memorial Hall is good for both afternoon and evening. The entrance is at the south door, the exit from the north door.

The Memorial Hall tickets are good for the Hemenway Gymnasium after 6 P.M., and there will be no admission without tickets. The entrance to the Gymnasium is on Kirkland Street (south side), and the exit at the west-side door facing the Cambridge Common.

The exits from the College Yard are between (1) Holworthy and Stoughton, (2) University and Thayer, (3) Massachusetts and Harvard, (4) Grays and Matthews.

The entrances to the fenced-off portion of the Yard are between (1) Massachusetts and Harvard, (2) Holworthy and Thayer, (3) Grays and Weld.

The carriage entrance and exit is between Harvard and Massachusetts.

During the exercises at the Class Tree, the College Yard will be fenced off and cleared; and during the remainder of the afternoon and evening a ticket will be required of every gentleman entering the portion of the Yard enclosed by the fence. To facilitate the clearing of the Yard, seniors should see that their guests who are not at the Tree are in their parlors.

Return checks will be issued to those leaving the Yard until 8.30 P.M., after which no checks will be given, and only those having Yard or Memorial tickets will be admitted within the enclosure.

Graduates desiring admittance to the Yard after 5 o'clock P.M. are requested to apply for tickets to Mr. Jones on June 21 or 22, between 2 and 3 o'clock P.M., at Harvard Hall. No graduate will be admitted to the Yard without a ticket.

To aid the Class-Day Committee, all persons are expected to conform strictly to the above arrangements.

CLASS ODE OF 1887.

BY GEORGE PIERCE BAKER, JUN.

I.

Sons of mother undaunted who proudly to-day
For your parting high festival makes,
Who calmly and bravely sends into life's fray
The children whose love just awakes,
Oh! live not in visions or fancies, nor dream
Of achievements heroic at length:
Act, act! till your lives in their manliness seem
To be worthy her grandeur and strength.

II.

Henceforth we are bound in close brotherly ties
With the band of the living and dead,
Who, striving, have woven in tenderest wise,
New laurels to wreathe her grand head.
Then shall we not labor, assured of her praise, —
Since no love to the coward she yields, —
If, victors, we come with new spoils from the ways,
Or, though conquered, return on our shields?

NOTE. — The ode above printed is taken by permission from the Class-Day number of "The Harvard Advocate," which contains the Ode, Poem, Oration, and a complete list of spreads, besides much interesting reading-matter. "The Advocate" was founded in 1867, and is the oldest of all the Harvard papers.

The Baccalaureate Hymn of '87.

At the brink of Life's vague ocean,
Poising for the awful leap,
Let us fix our souls' devotion
Ere we struggle with the Deep.

Through the waters closing o'er us
Glimmer changeful phantasies:
Pleasure, pow'r, and wealth allure us,
But the soul is not of these.

Darkened by this life of seeming,
By the turbid surge of time,
Still, with sacred lustre beaming,
Lives for us the Truth sublime.

Let us strive in its direction
Though attainment may not be,
For the pathway to Perfection
Is communion, God, with thee.

THE GRADUATING CLASS, 1887.

On the succeeding pages is given a complete catalogue of the full names, the homes, and the college-rooms, of the graduating class. In addition are given, as far as could be ascertained, the places where the individual members are receiving their friends on Class-Day. It will be noticed that most of the receptions — "spreads" or "teas," as they are called — take place with the three societies — the Hasty Pudding,[1] the Pi Eta,[2] and the Signet[3] — or with groups of classmates.

The information given in these pages is always in this order: (1) The full name, (2) the home of the student, (3) his college-room, (4) when and where he is receiving his friends. The abbreviations are those familiar to all Harvard men, and are as follows: —

C.	College House.	M.	Matthews Hall.
G.	Grays Hall.	R.	Read's Block.
H.	Hollis Hall.	S.	Stoughton Hall.
H. B.	Hilton's Block.	P. E.	Pi Eta Society.

THE UNITED STATES HOTEL OF BOSTON,

OF which TILLY HAYNES is proprietor, has shown changes under his management which are almost incredible. Taking the United States Hotel in 1880, after it had been declining in patronage and standing for years, Mr. Haynes almost at a touch revolutionized the place, and the popular regard for the old hotel, so that it once more gained a foot-hold as one of the most noted hotels in the United States. He began by remodelling and enlarging the interior, and refurnishing and improving it throughout, until it could justly be announced as one of the largest, best furnished, and best conducted hotels in this section of the country. In his work Mr. Haynes showed the results of his private and public efforts, which have made his name known to all who keep informed on the public interests of the State of Massachusetts. It will not be forgotten that he opened and successfully maintained the Haynes Opera House at Springfield, when the sentiment was against theatres. It will be remembered also that the Haynes Hotel in the same city was one of the best patronized hostelries in Western Massachusetts. And furthermore, his public services in the Senate of Massachusetts will be remembered as a public trust, faithfully and competently executed. As a host and as an individual, every one knows Mr. Haynes as whole-souled, generous, and public-spirited. It is, therefore, not to be wondered at, that the United States Hotel has, in his time, drawn a patronage that keeps the great accommodations strained to meet the constant demand on them. His spirit pervades the entire hostelry; and from the time that a guest gets within doors, his stay in this hotel is made pleasant, satisfactory, and luxurious, notwithstanding the fact that the prices range only from $2.50 a day upwards. There is no hotel in Boston furnishing more for the money charged than the "United States" does. As a political resort, this place has become noted; for under the management of the United States Hotel Company, of which the Hon. George G. Crocker is secretary, and the Hon. Tilly Haynes is proprietor, it has become the home of a large number of the members of the Senate and House and their families. Under the present management, too, the neighborhood on all sides has taken such a progressive step as to become conspicuously noticeable. Its nearness to the Boston and Albany, the Old Colony and Fall River, the New York and New England, and the Boston and Providence depots, makes the "United States" a centrally located, as well as a most desirable, hotel.

INVESTMENT BOND.

YOUR attention is called to the Investment Bond, issued by the Manhattan Life Ins. Co., whereby a certain amount is secured, payable at the end of twenty years, or previously in case of death.

Unlike other first-class investments the principal sum is not required at once, but is payable in ten equal annual instalments.

To a man of 40 years of age the annual cost for a Bond of $10,000, increased by profits to $11,607.00, would be $796.80, and in case of death during the first ten years, the profit over the amount invested would be as follows, viz: If death should occur

In 1st year, - -	$10,810.20	In 6th year, - -	6,826.20
In 2d year, - -	10,013.40	In 7th year, - -	6,029 40
In 3d year, - -	9,216.60	In 8th year, - -	5,232.60
In 4th year, - -	8,419.80	In 9th year, - -	4,435.80
In 5th year, - -	7,623.00	In 10th year, - -	3,639.00

At the end of the period, the profit is about forty-five per cent. on the total money paid in.

Full information as to this new plan of investment, showing the amount of annual deposit required to be paid at each age to secure similar results, will be promptly furnished by the Company or by any of its agents on application to them.

TO THE COLLEGE PUMP.

YOUR wooden arm you hold outstretched
To shake with passers-by:
Your friends are always thirsty ones,
But you are never dry.

A hundred Classes at your lips
Have drunk, and passed away;
And where their fathers quenched their thirst,
The sons now quench to-day.

Some long for claret or champagne,
And some for sherries pale,
And some indulge in Adam's beer,
But you in Adam's ale.

THE COLLEGE PAPERS.

"THE HARVARD ADVOCATE" is the oldest of the existing college papers, being founded in 1866. It is published fortnightly.

"THE DAILY CRIMSON" is an outgrowth of "THE CRIMSON," a fortnightly founded in 1873, and "THE DAILY HERALD" founded in 1882. The editorial rooms are in the Lyceum Building.

"THE HARVARD LAMPOON" was founded in 1876. It is a humorous illustrated paper, published fortnightly.

"THE HARVARD MONTHLY," founded in 1885, aims to be a distinctively literary paper. The leading article in each number is by some prominent graduate.

UNDERGRADUATE SOCIETIES.

THE INSTITUTE OF 1770 is the oldest of the College societies. The name tells the story of its age, and its active members are confined to the sophomore class. Its rooms are in Brattle Square.

THE HARVARD BRANCH OF THE Φ B K is the oldest existing chapter of that fraternity. It was founded in 1779. Membership is limited to the first twenty-five men on the rank list of each class. It has long since ceased to be an active society in college life, the principal features of its existence being the re-unions, and election of officers.

THE PORCELLIAN CLUB, a social organization, has rooms on Harvard, near Holyoke, Street. It was founded in 1791, and selects eight members from each class.

THE HASTY PUDDING CLUB is the largest and most popular society. Founded in 1795, it selects about one-third of each class for members, and owns and occupies the society building on Holmes Field. It also has rooms in Brattle Square.

THE CHRISTIAN BRETHREN, founded in 1802, is, as its name implies, a society for religious culture. It was made a branch of the Intercollegiate Young Men's Christian Association in 1885. The rooms are in the Lawrence Scientific School Building.

The Pierian Sodality, founded in 1808, is the oldest college musical society in the United States. It meets in Roberts Block.

The Harvard Natural History Society is a practical organization for the promotion of scientific study. It was founded in 1837, and is in a most flourishing condition.

The O K is a purely literary society, founded in 1858. Its meetings are held fortnightly in rooms of its members.

The Glee Club was founded in the same year. The rooms are in Brattle Square.

The St. Paul's Society is a religious organization of the Protestant-Episcopal Church. Its meetings are held in 17 Grays.

The Π Η (Pi Eta) Society, the second largest social organization, was founded in 1865. Its rooms are in Brattle Square.

The A. D. Club occupies a club-house, corner of Mount Auburn and Dunster Streets.

The Harvard Chapter of the Α Δ Φ was established in 1836. Members are elected from the three upper classes.

The Everett Athenæum, a sophomore society, was founded in 1869. Rooms in 19 Brattle Square.

The Signet is a literary senior society, founded in 1870. Rooms, 7 Brattle Square.

The Harvard Art Club was founded in 1873. The club occupies No. 19 Grays Hall.

The Harvard Finance Club was founded in 1878. Under its auspices, lectures on economic topics are given during the winter.

The Harvard Historical Society, founded in 1880, is composed of seniors and resident graduates.

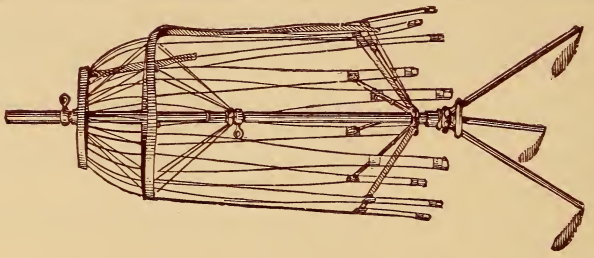

The Harvard Brass Band was organized in 1883. The members meet for practice in the Hasty Pudding building on Holmes Field.

The Harvard Chapter of the Δ Υ was established in 1881. The rooms are in the Lawrence Scientific School building.

The Iota Charge of the Θ Δ Χ was established in 1855. The rooms are in Roberts Block.

The Rho Chapter of the Ζ Ψ Fraternity was established in 1847. Its rooms are on Church Street.

The Harvard Total Abstinence League indicates its objects in its name. Under its auspices, addresses are made during the year by prominent temperance speakers.

The Harvard Union is a debating society which meets every alternate Thursday evening in Sever 11.

ATHLETIC ORGANIZATIONS.

The H. U. Base-Ball Club was organized in 1865 by members of the class of 1866. Its captain is elected by the Nine itself, while the other officers are chosen at a general meeting of the undergraduates of the College.

The H. U. Boat Club is directed by an executive committee, all the members of which, excepting the captain, are chosen by the undergraduates. The boat club not only controls the management of the "'Varsity Crew," but also the general aquatic affairs of the College, including the class-races held each spring and autumn.

The Foot-Ball Club was organized in 1873, and has played games every year, at first with fifteen men, and later with only eleven.

The Athletic Association is a general organization in which any undergraduate can be a member by paying the initiation-fee and the annual dues. Exhibitions are given in the gymnasium, and out on Jarvis Field, which are attended by large numbers of ladies and gentlemen.

The Lacrosse Association was for a time popular, and had a very fair team, which played creditable matches with other clubs. For a time it was in a dormant condition.

The Cricket Club was re-organized in 1879, after many previous attempts to make cricket a standard Harvard game having failed. The cricket club had a creasel aid out on Holmes Field.

The Bicycle Club was organized in 1879, at the time when bicycling became a prominent recreation here. It has a club-room, and meets frequently for "club-runs" in fine weather. It also has given field-meetings on Holmes Field.

The Harvard Tennis Club is also in successful operation, and keeps up a creditable racket.

SHORT HAND AND TYPE WRITING.

THOROUGH INSTRUCTION,

AT THE

NEW ENGLAND

SHORT HAND AND TYPE WRITING SCHOOL.

This is a select school for fitting young ladies and gentlemen for positions as Shorthand Clerks, Typewriters, and Professional Reporters, thus placing those who are either fitting themselves for, or just entering upon life's work, in a position that will make them at once independent and self-supporting, and will aid them to bridge over that distressing period that often exists between graduation and final success in securing lucrative employment.

INSTRUCTION GIVEN ON CALIGRAPH No. 2.

At the college at which I entered, I reported for myself four complete courses of lectures on very important subjects. All my notes were phonographic, and when transcribed, my books became invaluable manuals to candidates for graduation. Since I have held my professorship, I have written out a great part of my course of lectures in Phonography, and found such advantage from it that some of my colleagues have lamented their ignorance of the art.—Prof. A. L. Gihon, M. D.

I do not know any one branch of knowledge which will so surely lead to immediate, permanent and respectable employment. It is to any youth who may possess the art a capital of itself, upon which he may confidently rely for support. Two pupils of the High School have left my office and are now earning by its practice a larger sum than they could have acquired by any other sphere of employment; and are able not only to support themselves, but contribute to the maintenance of those who may be dependent upon themselves.—George T. Campbell, Philadelphia.

HALLET & DAVIS PIANOS.

NEW ENGLAND CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC.
E. TOURJEE, DIRECTOR.

Franklin Square, Boston, Jan. 15, 1887.

HALLET & DAVIS CO.,

Gentlemen:—Please send us fifty (50) more of your Upright Pianos at your earliest convenience.

Having thoroughly tested your recent improvements, whereby the pressure is removed from the Sounding Board, the Volume and Purity of Tone increased, and evenness in all the registers, secured, let me congratulate you upon the superior grade of your instruments, and add my testimony of its merits to that of the many eminent artists who give it their unqualified endorsement.

Yours very truly,

E. TOURJÉE, Director.
